Strong focus on key healthcare standards certifications like HL7 enables CitiusTech to enhance and scale its healthcare integration offerings to its global healthcare clients

Sarasota, FL — 16th November 2009 — CitiusTech, a leading global provider of healthcare technology services, announced today that it has conducted one of the largest HL7 certification programs to date in November 2009. The HL7 certification program was conducted by the HL7 Organization – the leading ANSI-accredited healthcare Standards Developing Organization (SDO).

As part of the program, 30 additional CitiusTech technology professionals received the coveted HL7 Control Specialist certification. With the addition of these certified professionals, CitiusTech now has over 100 certified professionals - the highest in the Healthcare IT services industry. “Enhancing the healthcare domain expertise of our technology team through training and certification in standards such as HL7, DICOM and X.12 is a core part of our strategy of building standards-based products and solutions for our leading healthcare technology clients,” said Bimal R. Naik, SVP Projects, CitiusTech.

“HL7 Standard versions 2.X and 3.0 are playing a key role in clinical information integration. Strong competency in HL7 enables CitiusTech to offer robust and scalable healthcare technology solutions,” said Michael Henderson, past co-chair of the Control/Query Technical Committee of HL7 and founding member of the HL7 Query Task Force, who has assisted CitiusTech in its certification roadmap. “I think that initiatives such as these are very useful to any company in the HIT space to significantly increase the capabilities and skills of their engineers”
