CitiusTech Announces Launch of VaultAssist - Application Development and Integration Services for Microsoft HealthVault

VaultAssist enables medical device companies, healthcare IT solution providers and health providers integrate their products and applications with HealthVault and develop new solutions

Sarasota, FL — November 26, 2007 — CitiusTech, leading provider of healthcare technology services, today announced the launch of VaultAssist – a powerful application development and integration service for Microsoft HealthVault, a newly launched consumer health platform. VaultAssist is designed to enable medical device companies, healthcare IT solution providers and health providers to design, integrate and implement effective solutions on HealthVault while substantially reducing both solution development time and costs.

“CitiusTech has significant experience and market leadership in healthcare application development and integration – across technologies, workflows, healthcare standards and security. Our strategic relationship with Microsoft enables us to leverage our expertise and the unique proposition of HealthVault to integrate medical devices, healthcare applications and hospital HIS systems with HealthVault,” said Jagdish Moorjani, Chief Operating Officer, CitiusTech.

“CitiusTech is playing a significant role in enabling medical device companies and healthcare software companies to build exciting solutions on HealthVault,” said Peter Neupert, Corporate Vice President for the Health Solutions Group at Microsoft Corp. “Through our cooperative efforts, we will improve healthcare workflows and enable consumers to better develop, use and control their health records.”
